A MIRACLE IN OREGON.

A Wonderful Manner In Which A Man Was Cured of Paralysis.

A Case That Almost Surpasses the Miracles of Old.

(From the Rural Spirit, Portland Oregon.)

Upon the Calapoia River, at the edge of the Cascade Range, in the town of Holly Linn Co., Oregon, lives W. H. Henderson, a man with an interesting history. He is most interesting as told by himself in a reporter. My native place is Brooksville, Canada," said Mr. Henderson, "where I have always made my home, up to 1880, with the exception of a few years that I was a resident of Oswego, N. Y., New York City, and Chicago. In 1880 I came to Oregon. I am a carpenter by trade, and in the summer of 1880 was working at Corvallis, county seat of Benton Co., Oregon. I did not feel well all summer; my knees, elbows and shoulders ached so badly that I concluded to go home the last of August. One day, after reaching home, my wife was leading the horses to the house and called me to see them. While looking at the horses I felt my knees getting weak. I went into the house and fell on the floor. When I came to my senses I was in the lounge and my wife crying. John McDaniels, our nearest neighbor, was there. I recovered somewhat through the day and in the evening I walked to my bed. That night about ten o'clock I had another stroke of paralysis. The torture that I went through is too horrible for me to describe. I was helpless. The neighbors came in, Dr. Henry, of Brownsville, was sent for, and I made my will, but could not sign it so it was legible. The back of my neck swelled up; Dr. Henry had them put mustard plasters on my neck and down my back and down the side of my right leg, and on the bottom of my feet. The skin came off the bottom of my right foot. I was covered with sores from head to foot, had to be lifted up in bed it took so long to get me into bed. There was a gathering in my left ear it broke and discharged matter twice. My wife had to move my legs when they were moved. I had watchers at night for weeks. Mr. Michael Baragan, owner of the lumber mill on Hamilton Creek, was one of them. His post office address is Lebanon, Linn Co., Oregon. Mr. William White, head sawyer for the same, and Mr. James S. Rice, ex-member of the legislature of Oregon. Weeks went by and months, and I lay in bed helpless. When my bed was changed another bed had to be brought along with me and used across on to it. I do not remember sleeping a wink for months. They used a galvanic battery for months, but it gave me no relief. I had them write Dr. Mosier, apothecary, Grand Street, New York, stating my case. He wrote me he could not help me, after which I concluded that I must die. I had given up all hope. In reading my eastern papers I saw the miracles that a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were performing, but that itself would not have induced me to try them, had I not seen the names of Mr. G. T. Fulford, of Brooksville, Ont., connected with them. That gave me hope. I had known him from a little boy, and I knew that money would not induce him to deceive his fellow man. I wrote Mr. Fulford to send me some Pink Pills, and before I had used the first lot, I noticed an improvement. I sent for more, and in a little time I was on my crutches and walking around the house. The last boxes that I got are doing the business. The pain left my head altogether six weeks ago, and it is now as clear as a bell. The swelling on my neck is gone, and my right ankle is much better. I can get around now without any assistance, and am heavier than I ever was in my life. There are a hundred people about here who will testify to my sickness and cure if anybody doubts it."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription, and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brooksville, Ont., and are sold in every drug store, or by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. from either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

Notes by a Traveler.

Editor Kentuckian: May a stranger be allowed a few notes of travel passing through Hopkinsville? Yours is one of the prettiest towns of Southern Ky., full of life and activity and surrounded by fields as fertile and beautiful as any of our land.

A trip has just been made by me from Texas and Arkansas by way of Memphis to this place, stopping and preaching all along. Hard times are heard from everywhere, but as a matter of fact farms are being improved, cities and towns built up with substantial brick, public and private buildings; men and women are well dressed; and if prices are low to the seller they are low to the buyer. There does not appear to be any signs of misquidated men marching on to Washington selling railroad trails seeming to overrun the Governors of Texas and Iowa, and refusing to offer for $1.50 per acre for a year to land ripe in East St. Louis, while there are half a million acres of U. S. Government land and a million acres of State land in Arkansas to be had for the living on it, where they can raise hogs and hominy instead of strikes, riots and anarchy.

The Cotton Belt Railroad line now runs its trains across the big bridge into Memphis and will run a special train of sleepers from Memphis to Dallas Texas, to the Baptist convention meeting at Dallas, May 11 to 15th. This line is now in splendid order reaching many of the chief towns and cities of Arkansas and Texas. From Memphis to Hopkinsville was over the L. & N., now in excellent order and managed successfully, fully and to the public satisfaction. The writer has been over their lines from Cincinnati to St. Louis, New Orleans, Florida and Virginia during the last two or three years, and has noticed that trains are generally well filled and on time and the trip through the mountains of Ky. and Va. and through the great tunnel costing two million dollars under Cumberland Gap to Norton, Va., on the way to Washington city, is the most charming on this Continent.

There is but one remedy for hard times and that is industry, economy and abide by the laws of God and man.

PAUL BAGLEY.

If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any substitute article. Take Hood's and only Hood's.

In the May number of Frank Leslie's popular monthly appears, under the characteristic heading "On the Spot," the first of a series of personal reminiscences of an artist at the front in the Secession War of 1861-65. These reminiscences, written and illustrated by Mr. Joseph Becker, the famous original "special for Leslie's," touch upon the contrasted humors and tragedies of war from the point of view of the soldier in the ranks; and, being copiously illustrated with fac-similes of documents, sketches made on the field under fire, etc., present aspects of the great struggle in a new and peculiarly vivid light. Mr. Cecil Charles, the well-known Latin American newspaper correspondent, contributes to this number of Frank Leslie's popular monthly a timely Brazilian paper on "The Revolt of the Fleet." Another feature is Dr. Sherwood-Dunn's comprehensive article on "Medical Education in France," superbly illustrated with views of the Paris Ecole de Medecine, the great hospitals, clinics and experiments of Charcot at the Salpêtrière, Lays at La Charité, Sainte-Claire Deville at the Sorbonne, and Claude Bernard at the College of France; and portraits of Messrs. Pasteur, Frazer, Guyon, Penz, Brouardel, Pozzi, Pinard, Fournier and Francis-Frank. Other illustrated articles are "The Romance of O' Tama Chivara," by Alice Howard Gady; "Clusters and Corners," by Grace Ellery Channing; "A Day in Upsala," by Charles Edwards; "Birds of Fact and Fable," by Nelly Hart Woodworth; and "Sugar Beet Culture in Southern California," by Frederick M. Tuor.

COONS KILL A DOG.

Stubborn Four-Hundred Fight in a Pennsylvania Forest.

A spot in the heart of the old Pigeon swamp near Bristol, is strewn with the blood-stained hair of raccoons and hounds. John Cole, James Cole, man and John Foster of Bristol, started into the swamp one Saturday with three hounds on the first coon hunt of the season thereabouts. They soon ran across two coons bigger than they had ever seen before.

The coons were in a dense clump of bushes. Instantly the hounds pointed upon them, but met almost their match. Had there been only two hounds, the story would have been different. Coons and dogs whirled, rolled, squealed, revolved, yelped or went all in a rolling mass, while the hair and fur flew, and the hounds could not shoot without imperiling the life of one or more of the hounds.

Dogs and coons were soon covered with blood. There was no surrender on either side, and the desperate fight went on until the coons fell in the mud and were unable to rise or claw any more. When the men were able to drag away the dogs the coons were dead or making their last gasps. Their bodies were hauled into town in triumph. One weighed thirty-two pounds and the other twenty-five pounds. The wounds of one of the hounds is said to be mortal.

It's a Funny World, Indeed. When you are skipping gaily down the path is when you catch your toe in a tumble. On the other hand, sunshine comes only when the clouds break. The man who gets the pebble out of his shoe is the happy man. The fellow who never had a pebble in his shoe is merely an indifferent one. You must go hungry occasionally to know the real pleasure of a good dinner. Misfortune clears away the surplus of good things and sharpens the senses for their enjoyment when they come again.

W. A. Meany, a St. Louis bookkeeper had an exciting experience with burglars at his house, one morning. He is but recently married, and among his wedding presents was a music box. To this happy circumstance he attributes the fact that the burglar did not succeed in carrying off anything there was in the house.

One of the burglars in rummaging through his drawing-room stumbled across the stored music, and thinking probably that it contained jewelry or valuables attempted to open it. In doing so he set the music machine in motion, and presently Mr. Meany was roused from his slumbers by the touching strains of "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. Meany got his gun and started the burglars, and they started for a window. He arrived at the drawing-room doorway just in time to see two burglars leaping from the window. He fired, but the robbers continued their flight. One of them stumbled in getting over the front fence, and Mr. Meany is convinced that he shot him, as he found several splashes of blood on the ground and sidewalk.

A Mania for Operations. There are Frenchmen, according to M. Simon, who collect decorations just as our soldiers collect campaign medals. In certain official positions it appears the one thing is hardly more difficult than the other. "I know," he says, "two publicists who had this infatuation. One of them was full of medals which he hung his medals spread across his ample chest and struck downward and was lost to view in his waistcoat pocket. In the interior of which his imagination pictured far more honors than reality. The other was thin, to his great disgust, and he could only exhibit some thirty decorations in a row. Some one advised him to wear a double line. Just as some one else advised a double chain. He did so, and he was quite right. His breast was a collection of all the animals of creation in gold, silver and enamel. It amazed people to look at all this while he was speaking, and they were very glad of this little distraction, for he was an ass."
